Renard Anderson - Triple Champion

Labor Day Weekend was kind to Boulder chessmaster Renard Anderson. Not only did he win the Colorado State Chess Championship, but also he was awarded trophies for first place in the 1997-98 PC Brokers Chess Tour and also as the Tour's most active player. You know, there may be a connection there. Brad Lundstrom of Greeley made the same 5.5 - 0.5 score as Renard but finished second on tiebreaks. Brad had a really fine tournament, as did Craig Wilcox (alone in 3rd place with 4.5) and So Vang, who has a 15-year-old rating of 1724 but stomped high-rated players left and right to score 4-2 and earn a performance rating at least in Expert country. The tournament was a very exciting one, with lots of upsets and surprises. Josh Smith also scored 5.5 to win the Reserve Section, and the Membership Meeting Open went to Ken Schwartz and Shannon Fox, both with 2.5 out of 3.

New CSCA Board

At the CSCA Membership Meeting September 6 a new group of officers emerged. Mike Fuchs and I are the only carryovers, as we are joined by David Helt, Dean Brown, Katie Roberts-Hoffman, Bruce Galler, and Dan Avery. Observant folks will notice that this gives Colorado Springs a majority on the Board. Bruce Galler is taking over from Joyce Baldwin as Scholastics Coordinator. The chess community owes Joyce a huge "Thank you!" for the marvelous work she's done in building scholastic chess.

I did attend the US Open in Kona, Hawaii. I usually go for the business meeting but this year my wife and I decided to celebrate our 30th anniversary with a week in Hawaii. We stayed with an old Ohio chess friend and had a great time. I even played in the Open for the first time since 1978, and scored 5 points. I had a late start due to directing the Pikes Peak Open and singing in La Boheme, and so had to start two points in the hole. This kept me from playing any of the biggies. Michael Mulyar, on the other hand, scored an outstanding 7 points and was always playing on one of the top boards. Other Coloradians in Kona were Jim Hammersmith (5 points), Jack Maynes (4), and Gary Bagstad (3).

The Delegates Meeting went by quickly. So quickly, in fact, that it was over in just one day. One might even suspect that the delegates had other things they would rather do in Hawaii than sit in a hotel ballroom listening to speeches. The most important item was the approval of the Blue Ribbon Committee's packet of recommendations, which will make substantial changes in the governance of the USCF.

Colorado Chess Festival!

The big news for Colorado chess, of course, is the upcoming chess extravaganza in November, when we host the Interplay US Championship and Women's Championship, along with the Senior Open. Details and a complete schedule are elsewhere in this issue. Please plan to attend this event and play in the open chess tournaments that will be accompanying it. This will be a great season for Colorado chess. We need lots of people to help with all kinds of things related to it. Please contact me or Craig Wilcox (303) 573-5752 to sign up.

Etc.

Chess masters and other strong players who may be in the Colorado Closed - please contact me if you have thoughts on such matters as dates, location, prizes, eligibility, or other matters. It is always best to deal with these matters ahead of time. The same goes for the scholastics players.

Tournament organizers: always work with the Clearinghouse in scheduling tournaments. We have a Clearinghouse page on our Website. Be sure to send in Tour fees along with CSCA memberships money, and specify how much money is for the Tour. We need this information to budget for the Tour prizes. Note that we have a new Treasurer - be sure to send money to the right place!

I hope to see every one of you at the Colorado Chess Festival. This is the most ambitious chess project we have ever done in this state. Let's all make it fly!

Manus'cript By Manus Smith

Wow!! The US Championships! The US Women's Championships! The US Senior's Open! The entire Colorado Chess Festival! Could it get any better than that? The month of November will be smoking with Chess events in the Denver area!!! Check out the schedule on page 5.

Additionally, this issue has diagrams. Wow! Yipee! About time!

This issue is the start of a cooperative effort between myself and the editors of chess newsletters in some of the states surrounding Colorado. Initially, the editors will be supplying each other with tournaments from their states. Hopefully, this will extend into other information such as games, articles, contests, and newsletter signups.

And finally, I wanted to start adding some special stuff to the Informant. I am starting out with a few combinations on this page. Let me know if you like it and if so, I'll try to do more in the future.

Planning for the Endgame: Creating Pawn Weaknesses by Craig Wilcox

In the United States, the endgame remains the most understudied aspect of the game. Perhaps this is because the average player, without the aid of a coach, finds it difficult to digest the hundreds of technically won, lost, or drawn positions that appear in the "best" endgame manuals. Though there are a number of positions to memorize completely in case they should occur when our flags are hanging, it seems far more critical to know the general principles and to study them as they arise in the middlegame, when most of us find the game more interesting (possibly because we are awake).

To win a game of chess, one needs the opponent's cooperation, which usually takes the form of a series of mistakes. As one advances, however, the mistakes involve fewer blunders more positional inaccuracies. By learning about the various weaknesses, especially those dealing with pawn structures, we have a better chance of exploiting them. The reason we can focus on pawn structures is that, like the material balance, they are more permanent than other weaknesses. The pawns are often fixed in chains, blockaded, or prevented from moving by tactical means.

Not every weakness is sufficient for a win. Indeed, in the endgame, the "theory of two weaknesses" (espoused by such trainers as Shereshevsky) holds that one needs two distinct advantages in order to convert them into a win. Any weakness, though, is subject to exploitation in different ways. In general, weaknesses in a position make the position more difficult to play; therefore, weaknesses make otherwise good moves faulty and increase the chances of a blunder. Psychologically, when one understands that the endgame will be a difficult one, the player will often seek to resolve the game before the ending, which can lead to more immediate disaster. A positional disadvantage is a constant annoyance, and many of us would rather “go down fighting” (and sooner) than “struggle helplessly to the end” (and hope for a draw).

In the following positions, taken from my last two tournaments, we will learn about a couple of different kinds of pawn weaknesses, as well as the opportunities and mistakes that often arise from them.

The first diagram comes from my game against Josh Bloomer at the 1998 Denver Open. It shows how even a slight weakening in the pawn structure can be cause for worry—this time we won’t even get to the endgame. Josh played the black side of a Najdorf Sicilian quite well and obtained a slight advantage out of the opening. A premature exchange allowed me to equalize, and in the diagrammed position I’m probing for a small advantage. Within a couple of moves, we’ll see Josh’s task get more and more difficult. After the game, we discussed the endgame chances, and he was rightly concerned that my pieces might prove better invaders. Perhaps this caused Josh's uncharacteristic lapse.

20. Bf2

With this move, I'm trying to provoke 20...f6, which weakens the diagonal a2-g8, makes his black-squared bishop a little worse, and weakens the K-side as Black's pieces lose flexibility along the third rank. Bd6 or Bf6 were a little better.

20...f6 21. Qe3

Notice that I have a similar problem on the diagonal leading to my king. Fortunately, I don't have to deal with the other problems. After 21. Qe3, Josh correctly sees that I want to head for an endgame where I think I can penetrate the d-file. His concerns over this cause the upcoming blunder.

21...Bc4 22. Be4 Bd5?

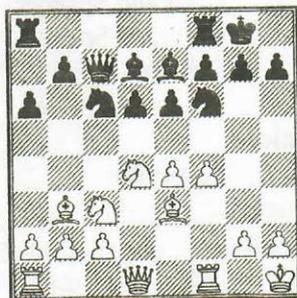

23. Rxd5! Rxd5 24. Qb3 Rcd8 25. Rd1

And just like that, the game is over. The diagonal proved Josh's downfall. Of course, this type of mistake is not something we should be counting on. The example only shows that a weakened pawn structure makes mistakes a bit more likely. 1-0

In the second diagram, I am playing black against Mike Emerson. We have emerged from a Sicilian with fairly even chances. I have a weakened d6 pawn, but Mike has the task of deciding where the white pieces should move to, which I find more difficult. Though Sicilians are often decided by blistering attacks, they are quite instructive for the endgame as well (provided we survive that long). White often conducts a pawn thrust on the king-side, establishing a space advantage and good piece coordination. However, if black is careful about avoiding weaknesses, the attack can be difficult to envision and carry out. When an attack such as this is not immediately successful, the advanced pawns find themselves isolated and exposed to attack. As pieces are traded, the spatial advantage diminishes and the ending can be quite difficult. As we'll see in this example and the next, storming pawns can be left out on a limb after the wind dies down.

12.f5 Nxd4 13. Bxd4 e5 14. Be3 Bc6 15. Bd5 b5

In this type of position, white wants to have a piece on d5, and black would much prefer a pawn on d5. If I can get white to take with the pawn, my d6 weakness would disappear almost completely, and white's d- and f-pawns are both, essentially, isolated. With 15...b5, I'm threatening b4 and also thinking about Qb7 (if Mike chooses 16. a3).

16. Bxc6 Qxc6 17. Nd5 Nxd5 18. exd5

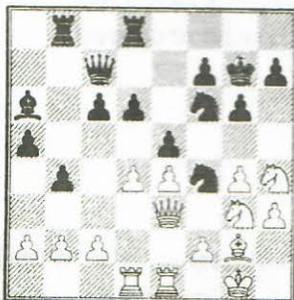

Now things have changed significantly. Although my bishop is awful, I believe white has more troubles. The d- and f-pawns, as mentioned, are exposed and difficult to defend. The main difference, however, is the power of each side's rooks. The black rooks have a good target on the half-open c-file, while white's rooks are biting on my e-pawn, which is solidly defended. Mike appropriately tries a rook lift to the king-side in front of his pawns, but my queen will make the operation more difficult. My plan will consist of putting more pressure on the c-file while simultaneously threatening the weak pawns. Though Mike makes a blunder in time pressure, the endgame should be won for black due to these factors. (It would be useful for players to see how black might win the weak pawns by playing out the game minus the blunder.)

Qc4 19.Rf3 Qe4 20.Qd2 Rac8 21.c3 b4 22.Re1 bxc3 23.bxc3 Qg4 24.Ref1 Qc4 25.Bg5? f6 26. Bh4?? Qxh4 0-1. Once again, a weakness caused a severe blunder—even the best players are susceptible!

The next example is taken from my game with Vance Aandahl, who championed the white pieces. In the diagrammed position, I have a slight advantage due to the pressure my pieces are exerting. This won't mean anything, though, unless I can create a few weaknesses. Vance will try to relieve the pressure through exchanges, which will, unfortunately, make matters much worse for him.

In this game, I use "reserve pawn moves" in the endgame to insure a win. By this, I mean that I save my pawn tempi for later. Note that saving these moves is most helpful when the opponent doesn't save them. My most useful moves in the game were 21...Bc4, 29...Rd4, and 34...g5, all of which prompt pawn weaknesses that prove decisive in the end.

21...Bc4 Hoping for... 22. b3?! Now Vance's Q-side pawns are immobilized and he has two backward pawns.

22...Bb5 23.Bf1 Bxf1 24. Kxf1 Qc8 25.dxe5 Qa6+ 26.Ne2 dxe5 27.Rxd8 Rxd8 28.Kg1 Nxe2+ 29.Rxe2 After these exchanges, my advantage is becoming clearer, especially since I can play some forceful maneuvers at this point.

29...Rd4 30.f3?! Now I believe Vance is lost. Shortly, all of his pawns will be immobilized.

30...Qb6 31.Rd2 Qd8 32. Rxd4 Qxd4 33.Qxd4 exd4 34. Ng2 g5! Notice now that Vance cannot move any pawns without losses. On the other hand, I have retained three "reserve pawn moves," or tempi, that should decide the outcome. The next step is to exchange knights.

35.Ne1 Nd7 36.Nd3 Kf6 37.Kf2 Ke6 38.Ke2 Kd6 39.Kd2 Ne5 40.Ke2 Nd7 Unfortunately, my plans took too much clock time, and I was forced to make this next move without the benefit of knowing whether the following side variations worked or not. Time pressure! [40...Nxd3 41. Kxd3 c5 (41...Kc5? 42.Kd2 Kb5 43.Kd3 c5 44.e5 Kc6 45.Ke4 h6 46.f4±) 42.Kc4 Kc6 43.Kd3 h6 44.Kc4 f6 45.Kd3 Kb5 46.Kd2 c4

47.Ke2 a4 48.Kd1 d3 49.cxd3 cxb3 50.axb3 a3 51.Kc1 Kc5 52. Kb1 Kd4 53.Kc2 Ke3-+]

41.Kd2 Nc5 42.Nb2 Nd7 This is perhaps the deepest trap I've set in my chess career—even though I understood that best play would lead to extraordinary complications rather than a clear win. The idea of the pawn sacrifice becomes clear on my 45th move, and the win becomes apparent shortly afterward. The idea occurred to me only because I knew that exchanging knights was bad for white in almost all variations due to his bad pawns.

43.Nc4+ Kc5 44.Nxa5 Ne5 45.Ke2? [45.Nb7+ Kb6 46. Nd6 Kc7 47.Nf5 Nxf3+ 48.Ke2 Ng1+ 49.Kd3 c5 50.Kc4 Kb6 51. Ne7 Nxb3 52.Nd5+ Kc6 53.Ne7+ Kd7 54.Nf5 Nf2 55.Kxc5 Nxb4 56.Kxb4 Nf6 57.Kc5 Nxe4+ 58. Kxd4 Nd6 59.Nxd6 Kxd6 Yikes! If you want an endgame study, try this. Black, believe it or not, has a winning advantage.]

45...Kb6!-+ Now we see the full strength of Black's position. White is up a pawn but cannot hold the game as he is stuck with only king moves and losing pawn sacrifices.

46.f4 gxf4 47.Nc4+ Nxc4 48.bxc4 Kc5 49.Kf3 Kxc4 50. Kxf4 Kc3 51.Ke5 c5 52.Kf6 Kxc2 53.Kxf7 d3 54.e5 d2 55.e6 d1Q 56.e7 Qf3+ 0-1

I hope these games show some of the features of pawn weaknesses. I should mention, in conclusion, that since these games all occurred recently, one can count on this type of endgame knowledge being useful more than occasionally.

Congratulations to this year's PCbroker Chess Tour winners!! We have some new faces on top, and some familiar ones as well! Renard Anderson and Shane Gaschler both repeated their performances of last year to take Overall and Class A honors respectively. Renard also managed to wrest away the most active crown from the hands of the B and C players who usually take this title. Sage Mo, Colorado's newest Master, played enough games at his previous ratings to qualify in this year's tour as an Expert (His average rating for tour games was 2186), and won that classification running away. David Helt jumped into the fray and displaced yours truly as the Class B champion. J. C. MacNeil, always a force on the tour, saw his rating drop to the Class C level, which helped him win a close race in that category. And Phil Brown, another regular plugger on the tour, won a tight race over Morgan Robb in the Class D/E classification. Great work everyone! This year's tour saw 345 different players play 3152 total games, with a lot of new faces joining in to make it another great year for Colorado Chess.

Errata: The tournament list last issue neglected to list the Adams State Open as a Tour Event. We apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused.
